Photo Challenge in Den Gamle By

You have one hour to find as many items from the list as possible. Some things can be found in many places around the museum, while others are only in one specific spot. Who can find the most? When you find an item from the list, take a photo of it – and make sure you're in the picture too! You'll earn one bonus point per item if you interact with or use the object in the photo. Remember to take good care of our museum – that means objects, people, and animals too!

Happy hunting!

Chickens	A locomotive
A sign with a pretzel	A chamber pot
A bed	Something you'd find at a butcher's
Outhouses (Retirader)	A vegetable garden
Some tools	A loft bed (Hems)
A moped	A person in costume (remember to ask
An advertisement	before taking a photo)
A poster with something red	Street lighting
The horse stable	Nice wallpaper
1970s clothing	A Kähler vase
A very old car	An ashtray
A fancy lady's hat	Something handmade
A very old stove	A guinea pig
A hardware store (Isenkræmmer)	A Christmas plate
A rotary dial telephone	An image with birds
A pocket watch	The Danish flag (Dannebrog)
The teacher's apartment	A children's book you know
A beautifully set table	A post office
A wall tapestry with a mosque	A poisonous plant
A doll's house	A bicycle from the 1920s
The shoemaker's house	A map of Greenland
The watermill	Mao's Little Red Book
A house from around 1864	An invisible bird
A skull	The Little Match Girl (Den lille pige
A staff member (remember to ask	med svovlstikkerne)

before taking a photo)

Along the way, you might notice...

Tip: Throughout the year, you'll find historical characters in many of the houses from 1864. Visit some of them – for example, in the Merchant's House (Købmandsgården) or in Havbogade – and listen to their many fascinating stories.

Is anyone home at the telephone exchange? Knock on the door and discover how the operators once connected people across the city. Notice how the telephone wires stretch over rooftops and streets, linking the 1927 neighborhood together.

Poid you know... there's a museum inside our museum? Actually, there are several. One of them is Musæum, where you'll find objects dating all the way back to the Stone Age. In the early 1900s, it was common for Danish towns to have their own small museum with local history and ancient artefacts.

Find: The hidden birds in the Mint Master's Mansion (Møntmestergården). Go into the bird room, turn right, and look for the marble column on the far wall. Follow the column up toward the ceiling. Can you spot the invisible bird?

Find: The outhouses (retiraderne). In the courtyard behind the Tobacco Factory, there's a shed with two toilet stalls. These were called retirader and were shared by the residents of nearby houses. The word retirade comes from the French word for "to withdraw." Many of these were built in the 1800s, but they were often too few for the growing population.

Visit: Eilschou's Apartments in the 1864 district. These homes were located across from Hans Christian Andersen's childhood home. He often visited Madam Bunkeflod here and was introduced to poetry and culture.

Visit: The 1970s kindergarten. In 1974, only 30% of Danish children aged 3–6 attended kindergarten. Today, it's over 90%. In this kindergarten, you'll find quotes and memories from life in a 1970s daycare. Children recall that the staff had hairy armpits and smoked indoors, that they held children's meetings where kids sat in a circle and shared their opinions, and that the toilets had no doors – so kids "sat in a row to poop."

Tip: Look down! Notice the changing ground surfaces as you walk through the museum. Each time period has its own type of paving – cobblestones, tiles, asphalt...

